In Christian Theology and Its Institutions in the Early Roman Empire, Christoph Marksches seeks to unravel the complex problem of unity and diversity by carefully examining the institutional settings for the development of Christian theology. Specifically, Marksches contends that theological diversity is closely bound up with institutional diversity.

Institutions In The Early Roman Empire
Prolegomena To A History Of Early Christian Theology
By Mark Schies, Christoph Coppins, Wayne ...

His argument for Christianity is largely that Christians founded institutions based on love of neighbor. He describes "Christianity's 20 centuries of unprecedented and still unmatched moral triumphs -- its care of widows and orphans, its almshouses, hospitals, foundling houses, schools, shelters, relief organizations, soup kitchens, medical missions, charitable aid societies and so on."

Liturgy was a vehicle of theology.

2.4 When Christianity transformed institutions, the old forms remained recognisable; that was part of the attraction.

3.1a The development of fixed norms isn't a power-play or a theological regression. It's necessary for the formation of new institutions. 3.1b Normative lists of a NT canon weren't only

~~Tweet review of Christoph
Markschies, Christian Theology ...~~

Christianity addresses the historical figure of Jesus Christ against the background of, and while seeking to remain faithful to, the experience of one God. It has consistently rejected polytheism and atheism. A second element of the faith tradition of Christianity, with rare exceptions, is a plan of salvation or redemption. That is to say, the believers in the church picture themselves as in a plight from which they need rescue.
