The central theme of this monograph is that a unifying framework informs the human activity of design across all domains. With few exceptions, each idea in this work applies to graphics, environments, products, software, services, machines, and buildings. I dream that the design process could be integral to the primary, secondary, and post-secondary education of all individuals in modern society.

Design: Creation of Artifacts in Society

According to our text, of the same name of the course, the design process is the planning of the creation of an artifact that closes a “gap” in user experience. An artifact must be something tangible, not an idea, although it may be physical, such as an ice cream scoop, or non-physical, such as software.

Design: Creation of Artifacts in Society (Coursera)

Weekly design challenges test your ability to apply those ideas to solve real problems. The course is deliberately broad - spanning all domains of design, including architecture, graphics, services, apparel, engineered goods, and products. The emphasis of the course is the basic design process: define, explore, select, and refine.

Design: Creation of Artifacts in Society - Mooc Design is conceiving and giving form to artifacts that solve problems and design fits into an overall problem solving process in which a gap is experienced.
Design creates a plan for the conception and form for the artifact. And then, there is some production process that takes that plan and produces the artifact.
