The engine that powered Panerai watches was a tried-and-tested Rolex movement, and was mounted in a steel oversized cushion case. Lugs were soldered to the case to allow fitment of a strap, making the watch wearable on the diver's wrist. Called the Radiomir after the radium that powered the luminescent paint, it was the birth of a design icon. It was tested in 1936 by the First Submarine Group ...

Panerai has been a supplier to the Italian military since 1910. As first, they sent them pocket chronographs. Between 1910 and 1914, Panerai worked on developing glow-in-the-dark devices together with Lieutenant Carlo Ronconi. The solution was a radium-based luminous material. The term Radiomir first appeared in 1916 on a French patent. The word itself is a portmanteau of the Italian words ...
