The Conscience Of The Rich (Strangers and Brothers) -

The first person narrator of C.P. Snow's 1958 novel The Conscience of the Rich is Lewis Eliot, a poor young man who has scrimped his way through Cambridge and become a lawyer. He befriends another new Cambridge lawyer, Charles March, scion of one of the great Anglo-Jewish banking families. (The time period of the novel is 1927 to about 1936.)

The Conscience of the Rich by C.P. Snow

Told with the mixture of humanity and exactitude that is uniquely Snow's, The Conscience of the Rich painstakingly documents the swansong of the British upper-classes. A meticulous study of the public issues and private problems of post-war Britain, C. P. Snow's Strangers and Brothers sequence is a towering achievement that stands alongside Anthony Powell's A Dance to the Music of Time as one of the great romans-fleuves of the twentieth century.

The social milieu at the center of the novel -- a rich Jewish family no longer on the economic ascendancy in England of the 1920s -- is interesting, but described essentially from the outside. The characters thus appear for the most part like caricatures, which does not seem to have been Snow's intention. The prose is tedious.
