Margaret Ursula Mee, MBE (22 May 1909 – 30 November 1988) was a British botanical artist who specialised in plants from the Brazilian Amazon Rainforest. She was also one of the first environmentalists to draw attention to the impact of large-scale mining and deforestation on the Amazon Basin

Margaret Mee - Wikipedia

British artist Margaret Mee (1909-88) began to catalogue and illustrate Amazonian plants and flowers, particularly the orchids, bromeliads, and other epiphytes, in Brazil in 1956. As an intrepid explorer as well as an extraordinary artist, Mee was not content to simply illustrate these plants in a controlled environment.

Margaret Mee In Search of Flowers of the Amazon Forests ...

From the first time Margaret Mee saw the moonflower cactus Selenicereus wittii (on her third expedition to the Amazon in 1964) she was determined to paint its flower, which blooms only one night a year. The genus Selenicereus hints at this rare plant's nocturnal flowering, deriving from the Greek selene meaning moon. However, Margaret Mee's first sightings were made in daylight, at times catching the cactus just after its creamy white flowers had closed.

Margaret Mee - in pursuit of the moonflower cactus | Kew

The Flowering Amazon was drawn from the rich collection of botanical illustrations preserved in the Kew Archives and featured the exquisite paintings of orchids, bromeliads and other plants by the renowned British artist and explorer Margaret Ursula Mee (1909–1988). Praised by botanists and art critics alike, Mee's works recorded the extraordinary beauty of Amazonia and included several now-extinct species.
